Proceeding of the Program

On the occasion of World Philosophy Day 2025, a one-day seminar—sponsored by the Indian Council of Philosophical Research (ICPR), New Delhi—was organized on March 14, 2026, in the auditorium of the Department of Philosophy at Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel College, Bhabhua.

Introduction and Background of the Event :

A one-day seminar was organized at Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel College, Bhabhua, on March 14, 2026, under the patronage of the Honorable Principal, Dr. Shankar Prasad Sharma, to mark World Philosophy Day 2025. This event was funded by the Indian Council of Philosophical Research (ICPR), New Delhi. Throughout history, philosophy has served to guide humanity in the pursuit of knowledge and the quest for truth. To uphold this glorious tradition, a highly dignified and intellectually stimulating event celebrating World Philosophy Day 2025 was successfully held on March 14, 2026, in the auditorium of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel College. This event was not merely a formal program; rather, it was an endeavor to establish a bridge between the Indian intellectual tradition and modern conceptual perspectives. This significant seminar was organized under the joint auspices of the Department of Philosophy, Sardar Patel College, and with the financial support of the Indian Council of Philosophical Research (ICPR), New Delhi. The responsibility for introducing the theme and coordinating the program was undertaken by Dr. Bhupendra Shukla, Assistant Professor, Department of Philosophy; under his expert guidance, in-depth discussions were held regarding various dimensions of philosophy. The program commenced with the ceremonial lighting of the lamp, followed by the Saraswati Vandana (invocation to Goddess Saraswati), a welcome song, and the singing of the university anthem. Subsequently, the dignitaries seated on the dais were formally welcomed. While introducing the chief guests and special speakers, Dr. Shukla highlighted the significance of World Philosophy Day. He explained that philosophy is not merely the study of books, but rather a perspective on life—a vision that leads us from darkness toward light. Continuing in this vein and delving into the core subject matter, he presented philosophy as a means to resolve the contemporary problems facing society. Dr. Shukla further noted that World Philosophy Day is observed annually on the third Thursday of November. This initiative was launched by UNESCO in 2002. The objective behind observing World Philosophy Day is to foster the capacity for reflection, encouraging individuals to engage in deep thought—specifically critical thinking—and to enhance their reasoning abilities. Furthermore, it aims to cultivate the capacity to comprehend and contemplate fundamental questions of human existence—such as: What is truth? What is the purpose of life? How do we distinguish between right and wrong? Additionally, philosophy promotes dialogue and tolerance by teaching people to understand and respect diverse perspectives. By fostering a better understanding among different cultures and ideologies, philosophy plays a pivotal role in advancing global peace within society.

The distinguished guest at the program was Dr. Upendra Kumar, Associate Professor, Department of Philosophy and Religion at Banaras Hindu University, Varanasi. His areas of expertise include Western Ethics, General Ethics, Philosophy of Science, and Analytic Philosophy. In his address, he delivered a profoundly insightful and logical lecture on the subject of "Critical Thinking and Philosophizing." He emphasized that the genesis of philosophizing occurs precisely where thought and curiosity exist. According to him, critical thinking develops wherever thought prevails, and it is this critical faculty that leads us closer to the truth. How is philosophy to be understood? What constitutes ethics? It is through the medium of philosophy that we, in the "school of ethics," learn about various forms of conduct. He stated that knowledge should always be constructive, never destructive.

Elaborating further on his lecture, Dr. Upendra Kumar noted that in the context of Indian philosophy, the very word Darshan (philosophy) signifies "Seeing"—that which is perceived directly or experienced firsthand. He put forward a significant argument: every subject in the world possesses its own inherent philosophy. The scope of philosophy encompasses not merely abstract ideas, but also incorporates ethics, logic, and the philosophy of science. Emphasizing the necessity of a scientific approach to philosophy, and citing the example of the Greek philosopher Socrates, he remarked that if we possess knowledge but fail to apply it correctly in our lives, such a life is rendered futile. Philosophy teaches us not merely to follow others, but to explore and discover our own unique path. True philosophy does not consist merely of blindly following in someone else's footsteps; rather, it lies in subjecting ideas to the rigorous test of logic and reason. Citing the Western philosopher Kant, he clarified that independent thought liberates human beings from fear. If an individual possesses the capacity to think independently, they can free themselves from any form of mental or social apprehension. Finally, discussing the dialectical philosophy of Hegel and other thinkers, he concluded that it is only when a dialectical tension arises between two opposing ideas that the discovery of a common or universally acceptable path becomes possible. In the present era, it is absolutely essential to adopt philosophy in a practical manner, rather than viewing it merely from the perspective of academic study.

The keynote speaker and chief guest of the seminar was Shri Prakash Pandey, former Professor and Head of the Department of Philosophy and Religion at Banaras Hindu University, Varanasi. His areas of expertise include Classical Indian philosophy, Contemporary Indian Philosophy and Ethics. In his address, he centered his discussion on the depth and comprehensiveness of Indian Philosophy. The subject of his lecture was "Indian Ethics and Their Implications." Opposing the confinement of ethics within any geographical boundaries, he asserted that ethics itself is neither Indian nor Western; rather, it is the perspective on ethics—Indian or Western—that varies. Ethics, in essence, is universal. The Vedas constitute the fundamental source of the Indian knowledge tradition. He described the Vedas as eternal and Apurusheya(of non-human origin)—texts that have been classified into four parts based on human needs and for the sake of intellectual accessibility.

Prof. Pandey presented a beautiful exposition of Vedic literature, classifying it—based on philosophical principles—into the categories of Samhita, Brahmana, Aranyaka, and Upanishad. While highlighting the subtle distinctions between Astika(orthodox) and Nastika (heterodox) philosophies, he put forward a truly revolutionary idea. According to him, the Charvaka school of thought has historically been sidelined and dismissed as being "Anti-Vedic." The Charvaka philosophy interprets the entire cosmology—the universe—based on Pratyaksha (direct perception), an approach that is entirely scientific. However, in reality, Charvaka has not received its due justice. The Charvaka Philosophy, too, offers a powerful framework for interpreting the "laboratory of life" through the lens of direct empirical experience—a method that is thoroughly scientific. A significant portion of Prof. Pandey's lecture focused on the definition of Dharma. In the Indian tradition, Dharma can never be equated with "Religion" or a specific sectarian creed. Dharma is that fundamental principle which facilitates an individual's holistic development and aids them in attaining their ultimate goal: Moksha (liberation). Citing the Mimamsa Philosophy, he stated that the Vedas instruct us on what actions we ought to perform and what we ought to avoid. That which is ethical constitutes Dharma, and Dharma, in turn, serves as the very foundation of ethics. While expounding upon the Purushartha Chaturshthaya - the four aims of human life described in the Mahabharata (namely Dharma, Artha, Kama, and Moksha) - he asserted that Dharma must serve as the underlying basis for an individual's pursuit of Artha (wealth/resources) and Kama (desires/pleasures). No human action can be sustained or endure without the bedrock of ethics and morality. He further observed that while ethical conduct may or may not ultimately lead to Moksha, it invariably results in the purification of one's inner consciousness. God has indeed created this universe, yet He designates human beings as His instruments within it. Consequently, human beings must accept full personal responsibility for their actions and must refrain from engaging in any conduct that they themselves would find disagreeable or unpleasant.

In the final session, Dr. Upendra Narayan Singh, former Professor at Shaheed Sanjay Singh Women's College, shared his views, stating that the concept of justice is conceivable only when grounded in positive thinking and morality. He emphasized the importance of understanding philosophy by contextualizing it within current circumstances. According to him, philosophy teaches the one who weeps how to weep—that is, it imparts the lesson of maintaining patience even amidst sorrow.

The program concluded with the Principal's presidential address. He observed that the definition of philosophy evolves with every passing era; concomitantly, the definitions of ethics and morality also undergo transformation. He placed great emphasis on the cultivation of inner strength, morality, and Dharma. He asserted that the very essence of all philosophical systems lies rooted in the spirit of universal welfare. Furthermore, he delivered a profound message: one should never treat others in a manner that one would find unacceptable for oneself.

The entire program was imbued with intellectual vibrancy. The teachers, research scholars, and students in attendance deeply internalized the practical dimensions of philosophy. The vote of thanks was delivered by Dr. Sonal. The proceedings were anchored by Dr. Somesh Shashi, Assistant Professor in the Department of Chemistry, while Dr. Saurav Singh Vikram, Assistant Professor in the Department of Hindi, served as the rapporteur. The program drew to a close with the rendition of the National Anthem.
